

NEWS RELEASE
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
JUNE 2, 2010
(248) 851-4849

MICHIGAN ENVIRONMENTAL COMPANY POISED
TO RESPOND TO GULF OIL SPILL

BP and Government not responding to “Green Solution to Massive Pollution”

Detroit, MI- The product is available. The transportation is standing by. Recovery I, Inc. just needs the signal to start delivery, and the best possible solution to the nations worst oil spill tragedy will be on its way.

Recovery I, led by its founder and inventor of “The Golden Retriever”, has been in contact with numerous government agencies. It has attempted communications with BP’s Deep Water Horizon Response, Homeland Security, the Coast Guard, and the EPA. Senator Chuck Grassley, and his staff in Washington, DC, has assisted her in making sure that the documents and required paperwork to the various agencies arrived at their appropriate destination. Chani Wiggins, Assistant Secretary for the Office of Legislative Affairs, has received her paperwork, and was bringing it before a committee for discussion and review. To date, Ms. Brown is still waiting for a call; seemingly stonewalled in getting any type of response. Her complaint is not unique, as hundreds, if not thousands of others descend onto the disaster site, demanding to have answers, from government agencies working out of Louisiana, as well as from the offices in Washington, DC. However, Ms. Brown says, she is continuing her determined efforts to assist in the mitigation of the giant Gulf of Mexico oil spill disaster. She will not be deterred!

Right now, the product, which consists of specially dried corn cobs, could be preventing the oil from reaching the bird sanctuaries, the marshes and the fisheries in and around the ocean beaches of Louisiana. It can be used on beaches as well as in the water.

The Recovery I solution is totally green. It uses no harmful chemicals. It virtually guarantees a 98% recovery rate of the petroleum in which it comes in contact.

Since the onset of the recent disaster, Adria Brown, the President of Recovery I, Inc., has been pulling together all the necessary resources to assist the other responders. The revolutionary product she calls the Golden Retriever is one of nature's miracles. Once in place, it can solve a large portion of the devastation that is to be found in the aftermath of the giant spill. Corn growers in the mid-west states have been put on alert to have their cobs readied for transport when the signal is given.

There have been a number of articles written, that attest to the validity of the Recovery I solution. It has also been tested by the Emergencies Engineering Division of Environment Canada, in Ottawa. It was found to be an amazingly efficient and practical way of dealing with chemical and oil spills. Since she is having little response from the officials in charge of the clean up efforts, Ms. Brown is calling on the general public to get involved and contact whomever they can, to call for action. Recovery I, Inc. stands ready to respond.

Contact:

Adria Brown, President, and CEO

Recovery I, Inc

248 851 4849 Office.

recoveryI@msn.com

www.recoveryiinc.net

Ref.: Patent No.: 5,160,629

Date: Nov. 3, 1992

Method for Removing Oil Spills Using a Natural, Recyclable Absorbent